INTRODUCTION

The year 1970 marks the fiftieth anniversary of two important events in the history of the socio-economic status of women in the United States: the granting to women of the right to vote and the establishment in the United States Department of Labor of the Women's Bureau.

It is fitting, therefore, that the U.S. Department of Labor Library issue this bibliography encompassing various aspects of the status of women, not only to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of these two historical events, but also to point out that today's "women's movements" had, to a great extent, their forerunners in the years gone by.

SCOPE OF BIBLIOGRAPHY

This bibliography is a very selective list of publications that treat various aspects of the social and economic status of women, primarily with reference to the United States. A few of the materials are of international interest, however, as it is felt that these would aid in the better understanding of the status of women in this country.

Each publication listed is followed by the symbols representing the library holding that book or document. These symbols are the same as those used in the National Union Catalog of the Library of Congress. The following is a list of those symbols used in this bibliography:

AAP - Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama.
CLU - University of California at Los Angeles
DL - U.S. Department of Labor Library, Washington, D.C.
DLC - U.S. Library of Congress, Washington, D.C.
MH-BA - Harvard University, Graduate School of Business Administration.
MoKU - University of Missouri at Kansas City.
NcU - University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

The Department of Labor Library cannot supply copies of the publications cited herein. Most of the books and documents indicated as being owned by the Department of Labor Library would be available for research purposes through the Interlibrary Loan borrowing service of the library. Many of these materials are also available at public, college and university libraries.

Basic research for this bibliography was completed in May, 1970.

THE WOMEN'S BUREAU
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE HISTORY AND FUNCTION OF THE WOMEN'S BUREAU

The Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor came into existence formally on June 5, 1920 with the signing of Public Law No. 259 by the President. To quote from the Public Law itself, section 2 states that that main duties of the Women's Bureau . . ."shall be. . .to formulate standards and policies which shall promote the welfare of wage-earning women, improve their working conditions, increase their efficiency, and advance their opportunities for profitable employment. . ." and. . . "to investigate and report. . .upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of women in industry. . ."

Among the fields in which the Women's Bureau operates are: women's employment and job opportunities, their working conditions, and their standing in civil, political, business, and professional life. The Bureau works with other government agencies—state, federal, and international; women's and civic groups of this and other countries; personnel groups in industry, government, and schools; unions, employers, and trade associations; educators, writers, students, and other individuals.

The Women's Bureau: collects, analyzes, interprets, and reports pertinent facts, and helps agencies and individuals to interpret and use them; develops standards and policies based on the facts; recommends action and practicable methods for putting standards and policies into effect; advises and cooperates with federal, state, and local government agencies, private groups, and individuals to advance women's position. The Bureau is a fact-finding and service agency and not an enforcement agency. The services offered include: publications, exhibits, specially prepared reports; letters in answer to requests for information; consultation service in the National Capital and in the field; conferences called by the Bureau from time to time; participation in local, national, and international conferences and conventions on invitation; news releases, press conferences on important new developments; preparation of special articles for publication in newspapers and magazines; facts, figures, photographs, for individual reporters and feature writers; speeches, television, and radio broadcasts.
